IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our husband and father, John R. Bingham, who departed this life 4 years ago, June 1, 1938.

June brings sad memories,
Of our loved one who's gone away,
He will never be forgotten
By the ones who loved him best.

Four years have passed,
Our hearts still sore,
As time flies on
We miss you more.

Things have changed, Dear
Since you were called away,
We often wonder what you would think and say
If you were here today.

Sadly missed by his loved ones:

Wife, Daughters and Sons.

Everyday Items Put on List of Defense Needs

WASHINGTON.—The government has put consumers tentatively on notice that they may have to step aside until defense needs are met on a long list of everyday items, ranging from mattresses and canteras to woolen underwear and fire extinguishers.

The list included wool, cotton, flannel and other types of cloth, wool and leather gloves, motion picture projection and sound equipment, medicinal chemicals, woolen and cotton-wool socks, hospital uniforms, and business office equipment such as addressing and duplicating machines.

These and other items were added to the list of "critical items" issued monthly by the priorities division of the Office of Production Management. In all there were some 40 items, raising the total number now classified as "critical" to approximately 300.

Lights of New York
by L. L. STEVENSON

Model building is excellent escape from the strain of war, according to Clark Pool, president of the New York Society of Model Engineers. As proof, Mr. Pool cites reports from heavily bombed areas of Great Britain which show that, despite difficulty in obtaining materials, model building not only continues, but in many instances models, especially those of railroads, are taken into bomb shelters. The New York society, the largest and oldest amateur model-making organization in the world, maintains in its Knickerbocker building headquarters at 42nd and Broadway, "the crossroads of the world," the country's largest model railroad layout. There are more than 5,000 feet of track, 3,000 feet of which are main line, together with switches, signals and every device necessary for modern railroading.

* * *

Almost every trade and profession is included in the membership of the New York society. There are janitors, painters, doctors, dentists, lawyers, business men, writers, engineers and others all drawn together by a common interest in models. Midget power boats, architectual, airplane, in fact all kinds of models are built by the hobbyists. Those interested in railroads form the largest group. The society's railroad layout is in operation only during the annual two-week show. It does not lie idle the rest of the time, however. Just as is the case with real railroads, work goes on continuously. That is, whenever society members can find free time from their occupations, which is generally during the evening hours.

Work on the present layout was begun 3½ years ago when the society, to obtain larger quarters, moved from the third floor to the basement of the Knickerbocker building. It will not be completed for from five to eight years. Even then it won't be finished as the present layout is only about 60 per cent of the complete plan. It takes eight men to operate the system. There are dispatchers, train orders, time tables as on regular railroads. Not only do society members keep abreast of the times, but also ahead of them. For instance, they were the first to use an intricate push button in and out interlock which at present, gets trains in and out of Grand Central Terminal.

The 1942 show of the society, which closed recently, was its 14th. It is the first in which foreign countries were not represented, that being due, of course, to the world war. In the past, models have come from as far away as Australia. Priorities have their effect on model building as some materials are essential. Nevertheless, the model builders are continuing with their hobby, Mr. Pool said, and probably will for the duration.

In preparation for a recital, Edna Phillips, harpist, took a vacation from her husband and two small children. In a tiny hotel over in the Pocono mountains, she practiced to her heart's content until one day she heard her landlady, a wizened old Pennsylvania Dutch type, explaining to a man inquiring about a room for a friend that she could give him one at a slightly reduced rate because "there's a lady next door who keeps peggin' away at a harp at all hours."

"Oh, my friend won't mind that," the man replied. "He's very nearly deaf."

Miss Phillips' annoyance changed to amusement, when her landlady shot back sharply, "Well, in that case, I'll have to charge full price."

At one of the night-clubs, an air-minded actor, whose conceit is legend along Broadway, was under discussion. "Funny thing," volunteered Ed East, "his egotism almost killed him the other night. He was flying over the city when a searchlight picked him up—and the dope stood up to take a bow!"

New Zealand Uses Huts To Shelter Soldiers

WELLINGTON, N. Z.—New Zealand's army is now housed in portable huts instead of tents.

Large mobilizations of the militia and the national reserve, recruited from World war veterans, created major problems in accommodations. The portable hut is the army's answer to the problem of providing living quarters.

The huts have a floor 14 by 7 feet and hold four men. They are constructed of light timber- on frames that fold flat for transport. Three complete huts can be carried on one truck.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The 75-millimeter gun is a divisional weapon used by the Artillery as an anti-tank gun. It has been replaced to some extent by the more modern "105", known as the heaviest of divisional weapons. The 75-mm gun costs $12,000 and has been converted by our Ordnance into a "blaster" twice as efficient as in the first World War.

This gun gets maximum power for minimum weight and cost, and the American people are providing the finance through the purchase of War Bonds. If you do your share and invest 10 per cent of your income in War Bonds, adequate supply of this efficient gun can be assured our fighting forces. Buy War Bonds every pay day.

Marines Practice Commando Technique

The daring work of the British Commandos is not new to the U. S. marines, who have been using it off and on for over a hundred years. But the marines are brushing up on their technique and adding such comparatively new implements as the rubber boat in which you see a landing party going ashore. The destroyer in the background brought the raiders within striking distance.

IN MEMORIAM— In loving memory of our mother, Mrs. Blanche Furbush Caldwell, who fell asleep in Jesus a year ago, and who left us a goodly heritage in her example of patience, humility, and Christian fortitude, we quote and herewith publish the following tribute:

Beyond The Veil

"Veiled from our sight, withheld from our embrace,
Wrapped in God's silence which we dare not break,
Yet in our dreams we see her well-loved face,
And feel her presence near when we awake.
Closer perchance than those who beside us,
Who greet us face to face, and hand to hand;
Given, perchance, a power to shield and guide us,
Our unseen guardian from the Heavenly Land.'
